Contours are added to the bottle to give a three-dimensional appearance to the decoration printed on the full-sleeve shrink label. "Initially, molds were created for caricaturized animal figures, and the bottle's contours showcased the facial features, limbs and torso that are printed on the full-sleeve shrink label. However, this technique can be used for a variety of animate or inanimate shapes," Craig Sawicki, executive vice president, TricorBraun, said. TricorBraun (www.tricorbraun.com) is one of the world's leading suppliers of packaging, and it has 34 offices in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Asia.

INTERVIEWS

Mr Gordan Millar Founder, 30 January 2010

"Industry should change their perception that high quality & technically sophisticated packaging should be cheap"

PackagingConnections: What is your educational background? How did you get involved in the Packaging industry?
Mr. Millar: Educated in Scotland with further training to DMS and numerous commercial and technical training courses on a vocational basis. Although Virtu-Pack is a relatively new business, I and my associates each have over 25 years involvement in primary packaging and drug delivery.

PackagingConnections: Your key activities at work? What is the most rewarding part of your work?
Mr. Millar: Key activities at Virtu-Pack are product development with particular focus on drug delivery, packaging design and development. The consultancy side of the business is especially rewarding as it allows a complete overview and the ability to contribute to customer developments rather than only a part of it.

PackagingConnections: The most prestigious awards you have received? And the awards which meant the most to you.
Mr. Millar: We don't put ourselves forward for awards as most of our business
